These facts of the resources of Yunnan. ought to be sufficient to warrant the Colonial Government in taking measures to secure the free transit, through Annam, of all imports destined for Yunnan, -subject, of course, to rules to prevent sale in transitu or loss to the Annamese Customs, when they would then come under the Tientsin Treaty and enjoy the right of free transit throughout China after payment of the stipulated duties. Touching the subject of free transit through China, it is difficult to refrain from Treproaching the merchants of Canton and Hongkong with their inconceivable indifference to the extension of our trade in South

China by neglecting to use the means afforded by the 28th article of the Tientsin

Treaty, whereby the whole of South-west China might ere this have been opened to our trade, Yunnan included. Our manufacturers and the Chambers of Commerce of Manchester and Bradford will scarcely credit the fact that, although our merchants possess ) the power of freeing their goods, they have neglected to use it in South China, and that for more than a quarter of a century our imports have been taxed at will and virtually excluded from the provinces of Kwangtung, Kwang-si, Kwei-chow and Yunnan, instead of enjoying the right accorded by Treaty of free transit through the Empire. Seeing, then, that the Colonial merchants of Hongkong have shown such indifference to the extension of trade in South China, can hardly be expected that they will much towards attracting the Yunnan trade to the Colony; but, be that as it may, it seems that the negotiation for the free transit of our imports through Annam would be an easier and more practicable way of reaching the Yunnan markets than any plan hitherto attempted. The development of the Birmah frontier trade may well be left to the Rangoon merchants. We movements, but from all we can gather it | neighbouring provinces would also benefit, | has not yet recovered from the effects of the and take advantage of this outlet. Passen-. So far as we can ascertain, the principal markets of Yuman are to the eastward of Momein, (Pengynch), at which place fresh difficulties have to be encountered in the form of "the impassable valleys or abysses of the Salween and Mekong," after the daugers of the route through the Shan and Kachven territory

If the free transit of merchandise through prospect of the Yunnen traffic assuming ingress and egress to the second largest proportions quite equal to those of any other province of the Empire and the wealthiest single province in China, especially if the Transit system prescribed by treaty came into operation to the same extent as it has done in North China, and with such very satisfactory results. In order to supervise the Annam-Yunnen trade a Chinese Custom house would probably be established under a Foreign Inspectorate at the head of navigation up the Red River (Man-baa), which is regarded by the Chinese as a sort of the members of the Dupuis expedition lived bourne Bulletin are styled "The Garden of serge skirt made without flounces, a tablier

Assuming that the Tariff duties are not collected by the Chinese customs in Yunnan, it may be argued that if the Chinese Government contemplates establishing a Custom house on the Yunnan frontier, to collect the Treaty tariffdues, there would be little gained by abolishing the 5 per cent, import duty

God knows with what my substance He did levied in Annam, if the same amount is to be imposed in China but we contend that inasmuch as the merchandise for Yunnan is only in transit and is not consumed in the country, the Annamese Government can searcely claim amport duty on goods in transit, and that this collection checks the growth of the Yünnan trade, not to mention the other cumulative changes levied en route: whereas were a brisk trade to spring up with Yuman via the Red River, the Chinese Government could not be expected to exempt merchandise for Western China from payment of the same tariff rate collected at the ports:

What the Amamese exchequer would lose by the remission of this charge would not be much, seeing that in consequence of the heavy taxation, the trade is very insignificant, and it would doubtless be made up in other ways by the advantage to he derived from the traffic and business brought to the now languishing ports of of the Yünnan traffic. It has been stated that although Great Britain enjoys the preponderance of trade in a

China and that more British goods go to Yimnan than any other fabrics, the reason the government has abstained from entering into ) treaty relations with Annam is because Engband wished to avoid exciting the jealousy of the French in their work of unnexation; but now that the Republic appears to have i abandoned-the idea of further aggrandizement of territory, that of jection is removed, and probably the French Goventment would willingly co-operate in any measure calculated to open up the Red River route, and thus stimulate the trade of Tonquin; but if discovered the existence of a new written neither the British Minister at Peking nor character in use by them, entirely distinct the Colonial Government of Hongkong are from that of the surrounding people. The tardy development of trade in this vast Empire is solely attributable to burdensome and arbitrary taxation; and Annam suffers from the same complaint, as it will be seen that along this highway to Yunnan the taxation on foreign imports amounts to 121 per cent. to which may be added the dues levied after dues levied up to 20 per cent., but as by the Treaty of Tientsin, British merchants (and those of all Treaty powers) have the right to certificate their goods throughout China on payment of 21 per cent. in addition

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY. 13th inst., Lord Aberdaro (the President) Why? Because it is often necessary to cut in the chair, there was read a paper by Mr | the pages into "takes" for the compositors, Colborne Baber, Chinese Secretary of Her Majesty's Legation at Peking, giving details of a journey which he had made in Western Szecheun. His lordship, in opening the voccedings, said that when Sir Rutherford leock was resident in China he had induced the Government to establish a school there for students desirous of qualifying themselves by the study of the language for service in China. One of the most promising of the students of that school was Mr

Baber, who had acquired a most remarkable knowledge of Chinese, and also an important acquaintance with the country and the people. He was therefore selected to accompany the mission which was sent to investigate the circumstances of the murder of the late Mr Margary, and was then appointed consulat Chung-King, and had made several journeys of exploration in the province of Szechnen. THE PLAGUE IN CHINA. The Globe says :- A supplement to the report of the Local Government Board just published contains a great quantity of useful information as to the Levantine plague, including some notes of M. Emile Rocher on the Chinese malady called Yang-tzee. This disease, which is supposed to be bubonic plague, prevails specially in the province of Yunnan and some of the neighbouring districts, and is believed to have been introduced there from Burmah in caravans. It was not however, until the outbreak of the civil war that it became very prevalent, though since that time it has extended its rayages enormously, and was still raging in 1879, though the rebellion had been long put down. A very strange peculiarity of this complaint is noted by those who have observed its operations, viz., the fact that it appears to be caused by exhalations from the soil. In proof of this conclusion, it is asserted that the disease first attacks animals which live in or on the ground. The rats, who are the somest assailed, "come out in troops from their holes, and after staggering about and falling over each other, drop down dead. Buffaloes, oxen, sheep, and deer also very quickly succumb but fowls, which spend part of their time above the ground, more often escape." The men of science who describe this phenomenon admit that at first they thought the story a mere superstitious invention, but add that when the malady broke out during their stay in Yunnan they were fully convinced of its veracity. One of the causes which mostly contribute to keep alive the plague in China is the superstitious idea that those who die of it are possessed of a devil, and may not be buried, lest the repose of their ancestors should be disturbed. The podies are placed in a bier, and exposed to the sun outside the gates, so that the traveller who passes a village where the yang-tzee is raging is not only horrified with odours with which he is suddenly brought into contact. BRITISH NEWSPAPERS IN JAPAN.
